HKBTS Fifty-fifth Anniversary Celebration

It is God who has continued to lead the seminary throughout its fifty five years of theological education.

Our fifty-fifth anniversary celebration is a time of humble worship as we recall how God's grace has been at work in the seminary.

In our last issue, we covered the Fifty-fifth Anniversary Thanksgiving Worship Service held on March 18. We want to thank the many supporters and donors who have been walking with us over the years. Honorable guests came to Sai O campus that day and, together with our faculty, staff, and students offered up to God their worship and praise.

Other celebration activities include the Fifty-fifth Anniversary Concert of Thanksgiving and Praise on April 9, the Belote Lectures in October and the Graduation Ceremony for the academic year 2005-06 in November. This will be the first graduation ceremony to be held at our Sai O campus.

"It is through the unceasing grace of these fifty five years that we witness the glory of God. Tonight we bow in humility before God in His glory and lift our voices to sing in thanksgiving and praise... May our voices of thanksgiving and praise keep on ringing out."

President Alfred Kong

On the evening of April 9, the seminary presented a musical concert at the Concert Hall of the Hong Kong Cultural Center. Through the music, we expressed our praise and thanksgiving to God.

The performers that night included our students in the Seminary Choir, the Alumni Association Choir, and the Faculty and Staff Choir. Two solo items by alumnus Rev. Chan Bak-hung and President Alfred Kong intertwined with grand congregational chorus singing. The concert included songs of praise such as "Let the Whole World Rejoice and Sing before Jehovah,"

"Praise the Lord God on High," "Thanks Be to Thee," "A Thanksgiving Prayer," "The Great God who is All-wise and Almighty." Interspersed with the music were seven thanksgiving testimonies from our trustee, alumnus, professor, students, and staff in praise of God.

Each of the speakers recounted God's grace and blessings: describing how God established HKBTS and led the way in each of its phases of development; enabling graduates to follow the One who called them to a life of full time ministry and study, recognizing His loving kindness in leading students to learn and grow through their seminary preparation; and enabling the professor and staff to overcome difficulties in teaching and in daily routine work as they learn to rely on Him.

Even these seven unprecedented thanksgiving testimonies could not fully illustrate all of the Lord's blessings to the seminary throughout these fifty five years. As President Kong rightly said: "It is through the unceasing grace of these fifty five years that we witness the glory of God. Tonight before God in His glory, we bow, give thanks and praise."

Even though there are bound to be high mountains and small hills to cross in the future, our voices of thanksgiving and praise will continue to sound forth.

Talking about the Direction of Teaching and Learning, Dr. Joshua Cho's View on Biblical Teaching and Character Formation

On August 1, Dr. Joshua Cho was appointed as the seminary's Vice President (Academic) and will also continue to be Dean of Academic Affairs.

In this brief interview with HKBTS Newsletter, Professor Cho reviewed the development of academic affairs in the past few years and went on to share his views on biblical teaching and character formation, stressing that the seminary will continue to develop in these two areas.

"In the past few years, I have focused more on academic strategies and planning as well as on the recruitment of new students. Together with other faculty members, I have made a great effort to develop Hill Road into an academic journal that seeks to introduce important issues in the academic world to the Chinese churches. We want to encourage pastors and ministers to reflect upon the Christian faith when facing various ideologies and the present reality."

Furthermore, the faculty is encouraged to do academic research, and in these two years we have established an academic forum to enable our faculty members to present their research findings and foster the exchange of ideas between faculty and students. Meanwhile, we want to emphasize theology and especially biblical teaching. It is our hope that students will be trained to appropriate scripture and exercise scriptural reasoning so that later in their ministries, when they are faced with different situations, they can reason and make good judgments based on scripture. A minister cannot survive without vision, and vision must come from the Word of God!"

Professor Cho goes on to point out that Baptists are called "Bible people." Even though the term may have both positive and negative connotations, it definitely indicates that the Bible is the foundation of the Baptist churches. He also holds that seminaries must be deeply rooted in the Bible and that the Bible must be central to the development of contextual theological education. This is an important note because it is possible that theology students may be well versed in the thoughts of eminent theologians while lacking a sufficient Biblical understanding. Unfortunately, seminarians can have a good grasp of the application of counseling, leadership principles, religious education and psychology, while lacking the essential components of scripture.

In the past few years, the seminary has stepped up its biblical learning, and we are beginning to see some encouraging results. Professor Cho emphasized that the seminary will continue in this direction while at the same time focusing on the nurture of students' character.

"Theological education stressed the practical. A minister trained in a seminary should be able to preach the Word of God. At the same time, a minister should always strive to live and act according to scriptural principles, since the character of a minister affects the way he or she prepares and preaches a sermon. The character of the minister also affects whether or not God is able to use the message he or she preaches to bless Christian brothers and sisters with God's grace and help. A minister's character certainly influences the congregation among whom he or she ministers and counsels, and affects his or her leadership and administrative management.

"Character affects the kind of a leader a minister will become. For example, in the course of making decisions at a church, a minister must act humbly toward the parishioners to be able to hear views and ideas from every corner. The minister must also be humble before God so that he can discern the will of God and not substitute human desires for God's will. Patience is also important, meaning that the minister must not be impetuous but remains patient in all circumstances: be patient to allow brothers and sisters to grow in their understanding and to wait patiently for the appropriate time. Moreover, around the conference table, it is not only important to listen with humility, but also to listen with kindness and openness. Besides, a minister needs to nurture a heart of peace based on an attitude of humility and patience. A man or woman of humility and patience is also a man of peace. Such a person is willing to wait for God's guidance and will not resort to extremes in words and deeds when opinions vary greatly. This is not to say that the minister does not have strong conviction. When applying the Word of God to guide brothers and sisters and abiding by scriptural principles, the minister will assume a definite stance."

Professor Cho holds that when theological studies are conducted in ways that neglect the formation of character, they become hollow and lifeless. However, he does not mean that we should merely focus on the heart without making reference to various contemporary theories and tools. The seminary will continue to organize pastoral counseling, leadership and education seminars and international conferences, but the Word of God and the Christian faith must always play a key role. This is what makes seminary education distinct from secular forms of study.

Dr. Cho explains that character in students can be developed and refined when they engage in getting along with people they encounter in their daily lives, when they take part in worship service or read the Word of God; when they learn to serve God and man in ministry during their church practicum and when they involve themselves in an ongoing process of self-examination and self-discipline. Weaknesses in a person's character and difficulties in interpersonal relationship are often deep-rooted problems that cannot be solved simply by one's willpower. The minister must develop a healthy prayer life to deal with these personal and interpersonal problems. To this end, a teacher should guide students to come closer to God through prayer, allowing the Holy Spirit to indwell in their lives as they strive to build up the character of a worthy minister.

Dr. Cho says, "The nurturing of the student's character also implies the need to nurture the teacher's character, since the life example of the teacher is decisive in the success or failure of the educational process. This is not to say that any single teacher can develop a perfect character. As humans we all have weaknesses and deficiencies. Nevertheless, we pray that God will not only help, heal and build up each student but that He will do the same in each teacher as well. We need to have a team of teachers who have the heart, the determination and the power from God to teach and nurture our students effectively. The seminary will continue to recruit teachers who fit our special profile to join our faculty team. This is one of the most important tasks we set out to achieve.

Finally, Dr. Cho remarks, "Emphasis on biblical teaching and character formation may seem platitudinous. But as a pastor, a theologian, a theological educator, I firmly believe these two aspects are crucial and closely related to the life of a minister. I pray that God will continue to grant us wisdom to take responsibility to develop relevant theological education for the future. May God's gracious love shield and protect each of our teachers and students."

Awards Presentation Ceremony : A Meeting for the Angels

"In our life of studying in the seminary, God Himself not only leads and supports us, He also sends angels to walk beside us. To every one of the donors, let us say: you are in fact the angels that God prepares for us ..." Quoted from the student's thanksgiving speech

Such a remark is without doubt shared by many of our students: they are aware that God has prepared many angels to walk by their side along the path of seminary study, a journey not easy to travel. To those students who are in need of economic assistance, a donor providing a study grant is their angel, supporting and helping lighten their financial burden. To those students who excel academically, a donor of a scholarship is an angel, clapping hands for them and encouraging them to keep up their good work.

At the Awards Presentation Ceremony held on May 25, donors came together to present these grants and scholarships.

At this time, the seminary wants to express its gratitude to each of the donors and donating organizations for offering these grants and scholarships. We believe that your sharing and concern for theological education will become a cause for churches and Christian brothers and sisters to rise up and to share their resources in the promotion of the development of theological education.

Rev. Chan chi-keung, one of our trustees, gave a short talk in the ceremony and later led the congregation in a thanksgiving prayer for the donors and award-recipients.

Those presiding at the ceremony, the donors, the award-winning students, faculty members, staff and retiring staff receiving long-service awards were photographed after the ceremony.
